

Eight Dollar Boogie

One of my first musical composition projects as an adult was writing an original "theme song" for each member of my immediate family (see the "Family Suite" book on my website). A few years later, I decided to write a piece in honor of the person who first got me started in music, oversaw my piano practicing as a kid, played piano and accordion duets with me, practiced wonderful classical music herself for me to listen to as I fell asleep at night, and has always been one of my biggest fans. I know she loves playing boogie woogie music and likes anything in a minor key, like I do, so this one's for my mom. It's named after Eight Dollar Mountain, which overlooks the house I grew up in in southern Oregon.
